

Additional Resources:

- My favorite weather source is NC Weather Authority on Facebook. Ethan is incredibly talented, informative and responsive. He is honest and transparent in terms of what to expect and what can't be known, and is great about providing practical tips as well.
- While you will need to work directly with your personal utility company (likely Wake Power or Duke Energy), this site is helpful to see large scale outages and recovery efforts: <https://www.readync.gov/stay-informed/power-outages> . It also has a list of where to call and report an outage with your particular company.
 - Keep in mind that even if our power goes out, resources may already be elsewhere, slowing down response time.
- You can rent generators and other tools from Home Depot and Lowe's
- Be sure to research appropriate usage and placement of any kerosene and propane
- Ensure your carbon monoxide and smoke detectors are functioning and have a battery backup ready, if applicable.
